

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A polarizing liquid crystal device comprises a substrate, at least one photo-alignment layer which is uniformly aligned with a polarized light source and a nematic liquid crystal later applied to the photo-alignment later. A latent image which is viewable under cross-polarizers is formed by the photo-alignment layer and the liquid crystal later without the aid of a mask by a variable printing or laser writing process.